FORT LEONARD WOOD,
MISSOURI

The Story of Fort Leonard Wood

Fort Leonard Wood, the nation's largest engineer training center, covers 71,000 acres of the Mark Twain National Forest in the Missouri Ozarks, southwest of St. Louis. Activated in 1940, the Fort was named in honor of Major General Leonard Wood who won the Medal of Honor for action in the campaign against the Apache Indian Chieftain, Geronimo.

Only a handful of officials were on hand December 1940 to witness the ground breaking ceremonies. On that day, an unknown soldier of a huge construction Army turned the first shovelfull of dirt for the construction of the nation's largest engineer training center, a post that has trained thousands of fighting men.

The mud was terrific—so bad as to give the budding camp nationwide publicity. But the excavators and the wielders of hammer, trowel and saw surged on in their work. Almost all workers lived off the post. In spite of all the difficulties the work proceeded at a furious pace and was virtually completed the middle of May.

With the completion of the $40,000,000 fort and the 22-mile railroad leading to it, trainees began coming in full speed.

From the early part of 1941 until the post closed in 1946, Fort Leonard Wood trained some 300,000 fighting men. Such famous divisions as the 6th, 8th, 75th, 97th and the 70th trained here during World War II.

During the years the fort lay dormant, only a handful of groundkeepers were on the premises.

The business of activating an Army post started all over again for Fort Leonard Wood in 1950, shortly after the American troops began fighting in Korean.

This time, Fort Leonard Wood supported the 6th Armored Division engaged in replacement training rather than a procession of divisions being trained for combat.

On 16 March 1956 the 6th Armored Division was inactivated and replaced with the United States Army

Training Center, Engineer. The Secretary of the Army signed the order 21 March 1956 making Fort Leonard Wood a permanent installation.

The essence of Fort Leonard Wood is best described by the word "training." The fort gives recruit basic training, common and engineer specialist training and combat engineer training.

Among the specialized types of training soldiers can get at the fort are construction; machinery and earth moving equipment operation and maintenance; structural steel and sheet metal working; plumbing; carpentry; electrical installation and many other specialties.

TO: The Cadets of the 1961 Fort Leonard Wood ROTC Camp

This book will serve to remind you, in years to come, of the six weeks that you have spent at the Fort Leonard Wood ROTC Camp. It will keep alive the memory of new friends made during the camp, and bring back recollections of days of hard work, of achievements and some failures. Most of all it will be a reminder of your first impressions of Army life.

All of you have acted as members of teams, as well as leaders of those teams. That you have successfully performed both functions is demonstrated by your successful completion of the camp. These elements of teamwork and leadership are the very foundations of the successful man, both in civilian life and in the military service. The technical education that you receive in your academic courses on the campus, combined with the military training received on the campus and at this camp will qualify you to assume the office of a commissioned officer in our Army.

I have been gratified by the manner in which you have performed at Camp and am proud that we have had a part in qualifying you for your commission. I wish each of you good luck and success in the future.
